

Women's Squash Week 2015

September 19th to 27th saw the most popular Women's Squash Week on record with participation spanning 27 cities across 18 states within the US as well as 5 cities in Canada and 2 in England. Over 1500 women kick started their season with a fun event combining some competitive play with much socializing. Events included Round robins, team tournaments, beginner clinics and even hitting with the Pros on a Glass Court.

WSW builds in popularity year on year and has sparked or re-sparked enthusiasm for squash in many women players, inspiring them to get back on court after the summer, reconnect with old friends, or introducing new women players to the sport. As a result of WSW, clubs have introduced more women's clinics, more women's leagues and have seen an improved participation in club squash by women players.

This year also saw the introduction of social media with a US Squash Women's group facebook page and #WSW2015 being used to build a national supportive women's squash community. Reports came in from all over the country on WSW activities and successful events are now being shared nationwide. Click here to go to the Women facebook page.

Women's squash in the US continues to go from strength to strength with a new Regional Team being formed from active centres of women's squash activity. Members include active women players but also Club Pro's whose support is very necessary to maintain and build on the success of WSW.

Howe Cup 2015 is next on the calendar for all levels of Women Players. 250 women converge on Boston November 6-8 to compete for the National Women's Team title in 4 playing levels. This again is a record number of 50 teams – with much of this success attributable to WSW.
